

Equity Travel Jade WESTON

Mini Europe:

I didn't get to look around Mini-Europe as I wasn't very well, but I have a lot of groups that go here and love it. I think the literature that they give out is fantastic and from what the others said, I would recommend the guided tour.

STS Joana Barnes

Mini Europe

Really interesting, so good to see it. The UK has a tendency to feel outside of Europe and forget how many other countries are involved. Visiting Brussels in general is a great way for students studying politics.

Casterbridge Tours, Salcombe House Amy Barlow

Mini Europe

I am sure this excursion is great for younger children and I am certain they would enjoy learning about the different focal points of each country. As our groups are on average between 15 – 19 years old, I think the park was a little too young for our groups. The surrounding area with the restaurants etc would be a good place to be for lunch for a group.

European Study Tours Angela Dodgson

Mini Europe

I realise now that this is not just a tourist attraction, and will be useful even for older students to visit – those studying politics, as the guide said they can tailor the guided tour to talk about the political side of the EU. I think this will be good for my groups, as a lot visit Brussels for Politics studies, and this will still be educational, but lighter than the Parliament and Commission.

Travelbound Joanne Layzell

Mini Europe

Surprisingly I really enjoyed this – I think kids would too – its good to see Europe's may tourist attractions in one space!

Rhapsody Tours John Baines

Mini-Europe

I visited on my own – would send groups here.